Great Lakes Native American Medical School Applicant Workshop
March 15th-16th

Hosted by the Native American Center for Health Professions (NACHP) at the University of Wisconsin-Madison School of Medicine and Public Health in partnership with University of South Dakota Sanford School of Medicine, Michigan State University College of Human Medicine, Center of American Indian and Minority Health, University of Minnesota-Duluth and Twin Cities campuses

This workshop is a multi-day experience for pre-health Native American students who plan to apply to medical school within the next two years. Students will meet faculty and staff from various institutions to learn about application tips as well as research, funding, and career development opportunities available to Native students.

Limited scholarships available per institution

Applications Due February 8, 2019

To apply, please visit: https://goo.gl/forms/nxHoFiPxbhQb8CSC3

Hosted in partnership with: